

I think it is wrong for the NAB to believe that they can dictate what kind of local programming we can receive by satellite. Satellite television is already restricted by broadcasters and cannot allow local programming to anyone not residing in a local area. If they believe that satellite programming is costing local radio stations their listeners, perhaps the local stations need to improve their broadcast content.